Course Overview	To acquire knowledge of learning and teaching foreign languages (English) at junior high school and high school, and the basics of class instruction and learning evaluation. This is the third course in the English Language Teaching Methods I-IV series. The main focus of this course is the preparation of lesson plans and mock classes based on the fundamentals of English language teaching. In particular, students are expected to understand the current Courses of Study and to acquire practical skills through actual mock classes based on the understanding of the current Courses of Study, the teaching and evaluation of the four skills based on transmission-oriented English education, cross-cultural understanding education, and the basics of knowledge, teaching, and learning evaluation, which are reflected in the study guidance plans. Overall Goal To acquire knowledge of learning and teaching foreign languages (English) at junior high and high schools and the basics of class instruction and learning evaluation.
Course Objectives	Students will understand the principles of communicative language teaching as they apply to the four skills and grammar. They will learn some basic communicative activities and learn how to adapt them to different classrooms. They will evaluate their own teaching and further practice classroom management.
